WELCOME MESSAGE

The Ministry of Sustainability and the Environment (MSE) and Singapore Food Agency (SFA) are pleased to welcome delegates from ASEAN Member States and partners to Singapore for the 48th Meeting of the ASEAN Ministers on Agriculture and Forestry (AMAF), the 26th Meeting of the ASEAN Ministers on Agriculture and Forestry Plus Three, and its related meetings.

We look forward to engaging in meaningful discussions throughout 48th AMAF.

ABOUT 48th AMAF: ROOTED IN PARTNERSHIPS, GROWING OUR RESILIENCE

The theme for the 48th AMAF is “Rooted in Partnerships, Growing Our Resilience”. It reflects the centrality of ASEAN cooperation and our commitment to strengthen food security, advance sustainable agriculture, and foster regional cooperation to successfully navigate an increasingly complex global environment. The meetings provide an opportunity to exchange perspectives, deepen partnerships and chart a collective path for the region to collaborate on key issues, including the development of adaptive and climate-resilient food systems.

As 2026 marks the Year of Climate Adaption (YOCA) for Singapore, our stewardship of the 48th AMAF underscores the importance of strengthening collective resilience against climate change impacts across key domains including heat, coastal, flood and food.

Underpinning Singapore’s approach to food resilience is the Singapore Food Story 2 (SFS2), SFA’s strategic framework built on four pillars: Diversify Imports, Global Partnerships, Stockpile, and Grow Local. Together, these pillars strengthen Singapore’s ability to respond flexibly to food supply disruptions and safeguard our essential food needs. Through innovation, technology and strong partnerships, Singapore continues to build a resilient and sustainable food system, contributing to ASEAN’s shared efforts towards greater regional food security and resilience.

FIELD TRIP

Delegates are invited to participate in a field visit on the morning of Saturday, 31 October, to one of the following three locations: GreenPhyto, the Marine Aquaculture Centre, or Temasek Life Sciences Laboratory. Delegates are encouraged to indicate their preferred location early, as registration is on a first-come, first-served basis and will close once capacity is reached.

For AMAF Leaders and SOM-AMAF Leaders participating in the field trip, GreenPhyto has been designated as the field trip location. Further details on transport, assembly points and on-site arrangements will be shared closer to date.

GreenPhyto

GreenPhyto is a Singapore agritech company developing automated, weather-independent farming solutions to strengthen food security and sustainability. Greenphyto built the world's tallest indoor vertical farm adopting manufacturing process, powered by patented innovations. Its flagship two-hectare vertical farm began commercial operations in January 2025 and features a 23.3-metre-high indoor farming system with a designed annual capacity of up to 2,000 tonnes. The farm produces pesticide-free leafy vegetables using precision-controlled growing conditions, robotics, automation and its advanced Farm Operations Management System.

By optimizing resources and crop growth, GreenPhyto demonstrates how technology-enabled urban farming can support predictable local production, reduce resource use and contribute to food resilience.

Marine Aquaculture Centre (MAC)

Established in 2003, MAC is Singapore's national aquaculture R&D hub, supporting a productive, sustainable and resilient local aquaculture sector. Its work translates research into industry-ready solutions in hatchery technology, genetics and breeding, fish nutrition and sustainable farming systems.

MAC's key capabilities include recirculating aquaculture systems for controlled indoor production, hatchery protocols adopted by local farms, and selective breeding work with partners to produce faster-growing and more disease-resistant Asian seabass.

MAC's nutrition research also supports innovative feed formulations that improve fish health while reducing environmental impact.

Temasek Life Sciences Laboratory (TLL)

Established in 2002, TLL is a non-profit research institute advancing biomolecular science and biotechnology to support food security, sustainability and well-being. With over 180 researchers from more than 15 nationalities, TLL conducts multidisciplinary research and translates scientific discoveries into practical applications through collaborations with industry, universities and research institutes.

The 48th AMAF field visit will showcase TLL's research in sustainable and resilient agriculture and aquaculture. In agriculture, delegates will learn about research on low-carbon rice production and rice cultivars with reduced heavy-metal accumulation, alongside High Performance Precision Agriculture (HiPPA), which integrates robotics, sensors and artificial intelligence to optimise farm operations and crop production. In aquaculture, highlights will include research on genetics and breeding, nutrition and health, as well as modular container-based recirculating aquaculture systems (RAS). The visit will provide delegates with insights into how science and technology can contribute to more productive, sustainable and resilient agri-food systems.

Delegates can look forward to learning how science and technology can contribute to more productive, sustainable and resilient agri-food systems.

Singapore has only one time zone, Singapore Standard Time (SST), which is 8 hours ahead of the Coordinated Universal Time (UTC).

LOCAL TRANSPORT

Singapore's public transport system is easily accessible via MRT, LRT and bus services. Contactless payment via credit/debit cards and mobile wallets are accepted for fare payment. The Singapore Tourist pass (starting at SGD 17 for a 1-day unlimited usage pass on basic public transport, excluding Resorts World Sentosa services) are also available at SimplyGo Ticket Offices located at MRT stations and at the Singapore Tourist Pass Kiosks.

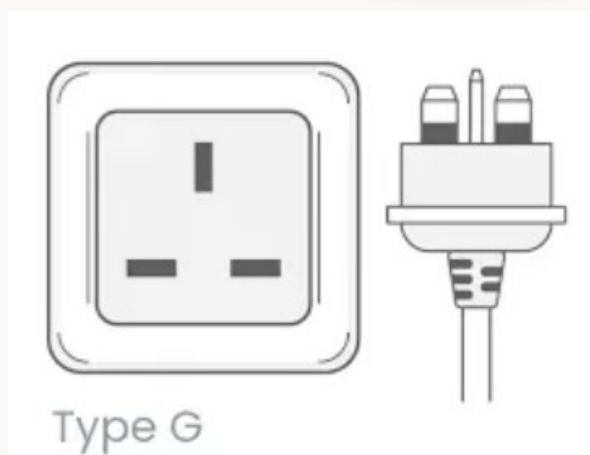

Alternatively, private transport services are readily available through ride-hailing platforms.

Public transport forms the backbone of Singapore's land transport system which consists of both the rail and bus networks.

ELECTRICITY

The standard voltage in Singapore is 230 volts (230V) at a frequency of 50 Hertz (50Hz). Singapore uses power outlets and plugs of Type G.

MOBILE DATA AND SIM CARDS

In Singapore, SIM cards for mobile phones are widely available at various locations, including Changi Airport, convenience stores, and major retail outlets. Prices typically start from around SGD 10 for basic data bundles and increase depending on the data allowance and validity period.

You can purchase SIM cards at the airport upon arrival, 7-Eleven and Cheers convenience stores, major shopping malls, and mobile phone shops in the city and throughout Singapore.

The unit of currency is the Singapore dollar, indicated as SGD. Foreign currency can be converted at banks and money changers, which are available at the airport and throughout the city, including most major shopping malls and commercial areas. They typically dispense Singapore dollars (SGD), and daily withdrawal limits vary depending on your bank and card type, usually ranging from SGD 1,000 to SGD 5,000. Foreign transaction fees may apply, generally around SGD 3 – 5 per withdrawal, plus any charges imposed by your home bank. For safety, it is recommended to use ATMs located inside banks, shopping malls, or well-lit areas, and to be discreet when withdrawing or carrying large sums of cash.
